IN the present SUPPLEMENT to a Publication which has long possessed a favourable reception with the learned Profession for whose use it is principally calculated, regard has been had to a correspondence with the arrangement which had been previously adopted in that compilation, as most convenient for general use, as well as conducive to the information of the student, and as a guide in purchasing law books; which of all others, from the nature of their materials, are more particularly liable to a variation in their comparative value and in their actual price, so as to render some assistance of this kind equally necessary and advantageous. Herein it has been generally avoided to insert the titles of books having for their principal object any political, temporary, or local subject, however highly distinguished in rank some publications of that nature may stand in the opinion of the Public, as literary compositions illustrative of general and domestic policy; such publications not being considered as properly falling within the plan of the present compilation.
